2019-APHIS-00511-F	Wills, Nick	Huvepharma	10/24/2018	11/23/2018	Huvepharma (USDA Establishment number 605) recently acquired a vaccine product from Zoetis called Inovocox. Inovocox was developed and licensed by the Center for Veterinary Biologics (CVB) by the company Embrex (USDA Establishment number 412). Embrex was acquired by Pfizer in 2007. Pfizer later divided the animal health products to their spinoff company, Zoetis. During this series of acquisitions and product transfers, the company copies of documents submitted to CVB for review and licensing of the product have been lost. We are requesting a copy of the records that CVB has maintained on this product so that we may have complete records about the development and licensing studies for this product. Unfortunately we do not have specific document names or titles, but below, we are including a general description of several of the key documents. In particular, we're looking for the items below, but we'd really like to have all the regulatory communication between Embrex and CVB about this product and its development and license application. Master Seed Production and Testing reports (for E. acervulina, E. tenella, E. maxima 01, E. maxima 02, and E. mitis) 10x safety testing Or 10x overdose for each seed 10x safety testing Or 10x overdose for the combined vaccine Field Safety test report/data for the in ovo application Back passage/Reversion to Virulence Efficacy study report for in ovo Preservative Interference testing Non-Interference Testing (Merial, Inc.
