Freedom of Information Act

Last Modified:

The Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) is a law that keeps citizens informed about their government.

Since 1967, FOIA has provided the public the right to request access to records from any Federal agency. Federal agencies need to disclose information requested through FOIA unless it is specifically excluded or exempted by law. Examples of information that is provided special protection under FOIA include certain law enforcement and national security records, trade secrets, confidential financial or commercial information, privileged communications within and between agencies, and personal privacy information. View the exclusions and exemptions in the FOIA FAQ.

Use this page to learn how to submit a FOIA request to APHIS, check the status on submitted FOIA requests, and review frequently requested APHIS records.
