Agricultural Quarantine and Inspection (AQI) User Fees Explained: A Small Entity Compliance Guide

Last Modified:

APHIS and U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) carry out AQI program activities to intercept and keep out foreign agricultural pests and diseases that could affect U.S. agriculture, trade, and the environment. To sustain the program, APHIS charges user fees for AQI services. The fees recover the costs of providing AQI services and overhead and other indirect costs of administering the user fee program.

AQI user fee regulations are listed in the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR), Title 7, Part 354.3, User Fees For Certain International Services.

APHIS Transitioning to Electronic-Only Payments for AQI User Fees Effective August 1, 2026

On March 25, 2025, President Donald J. Trump issued Executive Order 14247, Modernizing Payments to and From America's Bank Account . This Executive Order directs federal agencies to transition fully to electronic payments and collections to improve operational efficiency and modernize federal financial transactions.

In accordance with this directive, APHIS will transition to electronic-only payment methods for all AQI user fees beginning August 1, 2026. As of that date, APHIS will no longer accept paper-based payments, including checks, money orders, or cash.

Accepted Payment Methods (Effective August 1, 2026)

- ACH, debit card, credit card, or PayPal payments via www.pay.gov (preferred for fastest posting)
- Bank ACH or FedWire (contact APHIS for required banking information)

APHIS appreciates your cooperation as we implement federally mandated improvements to modernize payment processes and enhance service efficiency.

Authority To Charge Fees

The Government charges user fees for goods or services that are normally not available to the general public.[1, 2] Section 2509(a) of the Food, Agriculture, Conservation and Trade (FACT) Act of 1990 (21 U.S.C. 136a), as amended by the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990 (Budget Reconciliation Act), authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to prescribe and collect user fees sufficient to cover the costs of providing AQI services.

The FACT Act shifts most of the AQI program's costs from taxpayers to the carriers, owners, and importers of the goods, whose entry into the United States creates a risk of introducing pests and diseases. APHIS charges user fees to individuals or firms who use AQI program services. We structure the fees to recover both APHIS and CBP's costs to carry out AQI program activities, which are separate from other fees CBP charges under other statutes. The U.S. Treasury maintains an AQI user fee account containing all user fees collected for AQI program services, as well as associated late payment penalties and interest charges.

How We Calculate AQI User Fees

To calculate each user fee, APHIS uses an activity-based cost model. This cost accounting method determines a fee by identifying the costs to provide a specific service. This is a two-step process:

1. The program's costs are allocated to a series of activities.
2. The costs assigned to those activities are allocated to the fee areas based on the level of effort (measured in frontline full time equivalent hours) associated with each fee area.

For example, the costs associated with the cargo inspection activity (which include the costs of providing the service, as well as the administrative and overhead costs associated with providing the service) are allocated to the commercial vessel, truck, railroad car, and aircraft fees based on the level of effort in each of those fee areas. This cost allocation approach avoids cross-subsidization (for example, cargo inspection costs do not get assigned to passengers or treatment users).

AQI user fees require periodic adjustment to ensure they accurately reflect the cost of providing AQI services. These periodic adjustments occur via the rulemaking process, in which APHIS publishes a proposed rule in the Federal Register to solicit public comments on the proposed fee changes. Each comment is evaluated by subject matter experts and addressed in the final rule.
