

United States Department of Agriculture

The National Detector Dog Training Center trains beagles to detect food, plants, and souvenirs made from natural materials that people may pack in their suitcases when flying into the United States. Some agricultural products are not allowed because they could bring invasive plant pests and foreign animal diseases into our country.