

Dairy Materials (for Human Consumption) Exported to Canada for Eventual Export to the European Union

If an importer in Canada wishes to export to the EU dairy products (for human consumption) imported from the United States, or derived from dairy products imported from the United States, they should plan ahead and arrange for the U.S. product to be certified when it is shipped from the U.S. to Canada with special certification by the Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS). This certificate should be the same certificate that would be required if the U.S. product was shipping directly from the U.S. to the EU.

This means the product must meet the requirements for export to the EU at the time it is exported from the U.S. to Canada. AMS rather than APHIS provides these certificates if the product meets the necessary requirements.
