

Diagnostic and Research Samples Derived from Livestock Species

Hungary does not require government certification for samples imported from the United States that are derived from livestock species and are intended for testing for diagnostic or research purposes. Exporters should have their Hungarian importers apply to Hungarian authorities for an import permit. That permit should not require any APHIS facility approval or certification.