

Peru - Important information regarding trade bans and other restrictions

Poultry products:

On October 29, 2015, the government of Peru notified that poultry products from the following States remain under ban due to highly pathogenic avian influenza: Minnesota, South Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska for an additional 180 days. The bans on the other States that were affected with HPAI have lapsed.

SENASA recommends in order to minimize difficulties as to product eligibility that health certificates for shipments of poultry products be accompanied an addendum that specifies the location of the origin flocks.

NIES recommends that an import permit should be presented for any heat-treated poultry products from any affected State and that the exporter ship at their own risk.
