

Diagnostic and Research Samples

Portugal does not require government certification for samples imported from the United States that are intended for testing for diagnostic or research purposes. Exporters should have their Portuguese importers apply to Portuguese government officials for an import permit. That permit will require a commercial document, but no APHIS facility approval or certification.