

Rodent-Origin Materials Intended for Technical Purposes

Austria does not require government certification for materials derived from rodent-origin materials intended for technical purposes (purposes other than human or animal consumption). Therefore, APHIS does not endorse certificates for these materials. The importer in Austria must apply to Austrian authorities for an import permit. The import permit should not require any government certification of the materials.

For information on obtaining the import permit, the Austrian importer should see the information available (in German) at:
