

Non-Human Primate Products for Technical Purposes

The United Kingdom (UK) does not require government certification for materials derived non-human primates imported from the United States. The importer in the UK must apply to UK authorities for an import license. The import license should not require any government certification of the materials.

For more information on obtaining import licenses, the UK importer may contact UK import authorities. For contact information for UK import authorities, please go back to the previous page and select “Contact information for UK government (for questions from UK importers)”.