

How did nutria get to the Eastern Shore?

Nutria were introduced to the DelMarVa Peninsula in the early 1940s in the vicinity of Blackwater National Wildlife Refuge in Dorchester County, Maryland. Nutria populations grew and expanded into watersheds throughout Maryland's Lower Eastern Shore and they have been spotted in northern portions of bayside Accomack County.